The Primary Result

The Wednesday primary was a clean battle for preference and the several candidates on the Republican ticket fought in a spirited but friendly way for position. As a result, therefore, the election has passed without leaving the sore spots which sometimes come, and the nominees will enter the contest for election in November backed by a united party. The nominees make up a strong ticket, and Republicans can open the campaign with the knowledge that they are supporting men wholly qualified for the offices which they are seeking. Some excellent men were defeated but this was inevitable in a county where ten men were seeking five nominations.

May Amend Marriage Service.

The famous little word "obey," which is not taken seriously by one woman out of every hundred who pronounce it in the marriage ceremony, will be handled in all solemnity next month by a convention of churchmen, who will pass upon its dignity or indignity as related with the Protestant Episcopal marriage service. The commission of seven bishops, seven pastors and seven laymen of the Protestant church appointed to revise the ritual of the church has determined to eliminate the word "obey" from the marriage ceremony, and will so report to the convention which is to meet the second week of October in St. Louis.

A Memorial That Will Endure.

As a memorial to James J. Hill, the Great Northern Railway, of which Mr. Hill was the builder and head, will tomorrow put into effect a comprehensive pension plan for the benefit of its employees. The company has set aside a million-dollar fund for the establishment and maintenance of the pension system. All employees who have been in the company's service 20 years or more are eligible to pensions. Each will receive 1 per cent of each year's continuance service on his average compensation for the last ten years of service. The plan provides compulsory retirement at the age of 70 and voluntary retirement at the age of 65.

Fifteen Years Since McKinley Died.

It is fifteen years today since President McKinley died in Buffalo as a result of shots fired by an assassin as the President was holding a public reception at the Pan-American exposition. Canton, the home city of the martyred President, observed the anniversary quietly today.

McKinley occupies a place in the history of the country second only to Lincoln. He did not meet issues as important as those which confronted the war president but his life and character were of such kind that he had a hold upon the affections of the people accorded to only a few public men. Fifteen years time has not lessened the influence of his life and work.

Rippling Rhymes By WALT MASON

SUCH IS LIFE

In every burg there is a guy who fills himself with gin or rye, who makes cold bottles die, the death, who seldom draws a sober breath. Sometimes he practices the law, or, as a surgeon, wields the saw, or as Ye Editor, he may produce hot piffle every day. But 'twill be said by many gents, "Though he looks now like twenty cents, he has a Daniel Webster head, and if he wouldn't paint things red, there are no heights he couldn't reach, for intellect 's a peach. He would astonish all the land, if his expensive thirst were curbed." Such legends always hang around the chronic soak, who ever he's found. Once in a while the col reforms, one with soft dr's stomach warms, and piffle say "Just watch him rise, and ere 's name across the skies!" Alas the prodigy falls down, and fails to have high renown. He spends the balance of his days discoursing of his former ways, and telling how by strength of will, he broke loose from the old ginmill, until the people, sad and sore, denounce him as the champagne bore.

GERARD AGAIN UNDER FIRE IN SECTION OF GERMAN PRESS

National Liberal Press Agency Takes Ambassador to Task for What is Termed "Unwarranted Intervention in a Purely German Question."

Berlin, Sept. 13.—The American ambassador, James W. Gerard, again is under fire in a section of the German press this time for a remark attributed to him regarding a speech made recently by Dr. Gustav Stresemann, national liberal member of the Reichstag advocating, among other things, a resumption of the submarine warfare.

Ambassador Gerard is quoted as saying he did not understand how the representatives of districts for which export to America was a vital question could advocate ruthless submarine warfare. The national liberal press agency, in a communication to the newspaper, takes the ambassador to task for what is termed "unwarranted intervention in a purely German question" and says that the ambassador's remark is characterized by "that naive presumptuousness which believes that the decision affecting Germany's political future will be dictated by Germany's American export interests."

The paper declares that "the art and manner in which Ambassador Gerard—and not for the first time—looks after British interest is extremely characteristic of his general attitude."

The American ambassador in reply says he never heard of Dr. Stresemann's speech and certainly never made any public utterance of the nature attributed to him.

NEW LUBRICANT RESISTS HEAT PREVENTS RAPID SEDIMENTATION

Ordinary oil breaks down under the terrific heat of an automobile engine. Within a few hours, black sediment is formed which partially clogs down the remaining liquid from the friction points where lubrication is most vital. Such under-supply of oil causes friction between the metal surfaces, intense heat, loss of power and expensive repairs.

The new lubricant that resists heat prevents rapid sedimentation, insures generous lubrication, and, except where mechanical faults exist, prevents carbon.

Relative Oil Destruction
The contents of the bottles shows, illustrate the relative durability of ordinary oil and of Vedol. The new lubricant that resists heat resists heat. Vedol deposits only a small fraction as much sediment as ordinary oils. There is a fundamental difference between ordinary oils and Vedol. Ordinary oils are unstable and therefore unserviceable because of non-heat-resisting chemical structure. Special processes of manufacture developed by this company and the use of Pennsylvania paraffin-base crude oil give Vedol, the new lubricant, its unusual chemical structure, and its remarkable heat-resisting ability.

Make this test
Clean out the crank case. Fill with kerosene. Run the motor about thirty seconds under its own power; then draw out all kerosene and refill with Vedol. Now make a test run over a familiar road—up steep hills and along straight, level stretches. Keep a record of oil and gasoline mileage. You will find that your motor has altogether new pickup and hill climbing ability. Vedol enables you to get the maximum mechanical efficiency from your car and to reduce your expenses. Get a five-gallon can of Vedol, and make this convincing road test.

One View of the Study of Latin.

If one does not study things because they "train the mind," why, then, should one study them? The answer is extraordinarily simple. One studies things because they serve a purpose. I do not say, mark you, a useful purpose, but a purpose—a valid purpose, a genuine purpose, not a make believe purpose.

Mental discipline is not a valid or genuine purpose—it's a make believe. Meanwhile the number of purposes, of genuine, valid purposes, is simply infinite. Learning to read Vergil is, of course, just as valid a purpose as learning to play a symphony or learning to bake a pumpkin pie. The test is, however, not, Did the student get mental discipline? but Can he read and enjoy Vergil? Can he play the symphony? Will some one eat the pie?

And because people rarely care to read Vergil, because almost none of the thousands who study Latin ever can or do read Vergil, therefore, in so far as they are concerned, studying Latin has no purpose and cannot be defended as mental discipline.—Abraham Flexner in Atlantic Monthly.

How Leaves Purify Air.

It has been calculated that a single tree is able through its leaves to purify the air from the carbonic acid arising from the respiration of a considerable number of men, perhaps a dozen or even more. The volume of carbonic acid exhaled by a human being in the course of twenty-four hours is put at about 100 gallons, but by Boussingault's estimate a single yard of leaf surface, counting both the upper and the under side of the leaves, can, in favorable circumstances, decompose at least a gallon of carbonic acid a day. One hundred square yards of leaf surface then would suffice to keep the air pure for one man, but the leaves of a tree of moderate size present a surface of many hundred square yards. All other forms of vegetable life act similarly in abstracting the noxious carbonic acid from the atmosphere.

The Art of Optimism.

Live in the active voice, intent on what you can do rather than on what happens to you; in the indicative mood, concerned with facts as they are rather than as they might be; in the present tense, concentrated on the duty in hand without regard for the past or worry about the future; in the first person, criticising yourself rather than condemning others; in the singular number, seeking the approval of your own conscience rather than popularity with the many. Whoever lives the life of such unselfish devotion to the good of others and of all and lives it in the active voice, indicative mood, present tense, first person, singular number, is bound to find his life full and rich and glad and free—is bound, in other words, to be an optimist.—William De Witt Hyde.

Feat of a Baseball Pitcher.

Just one pitcher in the history of baseball—that is, a hurler who was working in a league of recognized standing and class—is credited with pitching two complete games in succession wherein the opposing batsmen failed to register a base hit. A big pitcher sailing under the name of Gene Wright, who hurled for the Dayton club of the Western association back in 1901, on Sept. 1 of that season pitched a no hit, no run game against Columbus. He followed up this feat by turning the same trick against the Grand Rapids team on Sept. 4.—New York Sun.

Tibet.

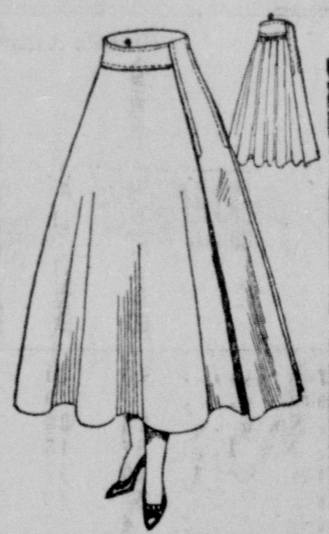

Tibet is all mountains and valleys. There is scarcely a plain worthy of the name. The mountain passes are at a high altitude and crossed only with great difficulty. The valleys are well populated, but the cities are small and the houses crude buildings of mud walls. The streets are narrow and dirty. Northern Tibet is peopled largely by nomad tribes, while in the south there is a more settled population.

CLOSE CONTESTS IN ELECTION PRIMARY

by a majority of 25,000 to 40,000 is conceded and this is indeed a notable victory. Mr. Russell had very strong opposition in a field of ten candidates for auditor, and the splendid vote given him in the down state counties, as well as in Cook county, indicates very plainly his party and personal strength. Opposing candidates were backed by a strong machine but the Jacksonville man and his organization were too much for them and he has won the nomination by the splendid majority already mentioned. The vote on the several candidates will appear from the accompanying tables.

VOTE ON REPRESENTATIVE

The Sangamon county vote on representatives was as follows. The figures are for 62 precincts out of 85 on the Republican ticket and 65 out of 85 on the Democratic:

Republican		Democratic
Jacob Frisch	8,205	Edward L. Merritt	3,920
T. E. Lyon	4,486	Clarence A. Jones	3,272
W. A. Pavey	3,102	J. M. Bell	2,087
M. L. Hildreth	872	John W. Sheehan	1,349
M. S. Dunn	1,780
Hugh Green	1,345

VOTE IN TWO COUNTIES

The vote given above, together with the vote cast in Morgan county, makes the results as follows:

Republican		Democratic
Jacob Frisch	8,868	Edward L. Merritt	6,742
T. E. Lyon	5,746	Clarence A. Jones	4,725
W. A. Pavey	3,777	J. M. Bell	3,618
M. L. Hildreth	3,694	John W. Sheehan	2,092
M. S. Dunn	1,915

OLD JACKSONVILLE

When The Soldiers Were Here

By Ensley Moore.

Member Illinois State Historical Society.

Jacksonville has always been favored as a place where things were doing. This is true religiously, educationally, politically, in a business way, and in various gatherings of the people.

There were gatherings of the patriots here in earlier days, as the Indian wars and the Mexican, but the article refers to the days of 1861-65. In this connection, it may be remarked that this series of papers is not—as a rule—intended, except incidentally, and to help out detail, to refer to affairs generally since 1865—the end of the Civil War.

The 14th Illinois
"Our boys" in the first three months service left here Monday, April 22, 1861.

The following Saturday morning, April 27th, a company, mostly Germans, came down from Petersburg, and marched up to the Morgan county Fair Grounds. For fear some future, remote reader may not know where that was, it is stated that it was the first forty acres straight west from the grounds, then, of the "Illinois Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb." The year before, 1860, the State Fair had been held there, and there were ample buildings, plenty of water, and a beautifully wooded grove to make a most delightful camp ground. This was in sharp contrast to some other Fair Grounds in the state in this respect, for they were generally used as places of rendezvous. Many were open to sun and rain, and deficient in suitable buildings.

One of these was Camp Douglas, at Chicago, straight west of the present Douglas Monument, on Cottage Grove avenue, about 31st street. It was afterwards used as a place to confine the Confederate prisoners of war.

The roster of that Petersburg company was, if the writer is not mistaken as to where it came from, Capt. Lewis C. Reines; 1st. Lieut., Fritz Fetzer; 2nd. Lieut., Jacob Rippstein.

Other companies kept coming in from various places, until the regiment had the necessary number, when, on May 4th, 1861, Adj.-Gen. Thos. S. Mather mustered the regiment into the State service. This was under the original call for ten regiments from Illinois.

The following were among the original regimental officers: Col. Jno. M. Palmer; Lt.-Col. Amory K. Johnson; Major Jonathan Morris; Quartermaster John Fred Nolte; Surgeon Geo. T. Allen; 1st. Asst. Surgeon Frederick W. Kersting, Chaplain Wm. J. Rutledge, Dr. Benj. F. Stevenson appeared as a surgeon before the troops left here; and right there was the nucleus of the present society of the "Grand Army of the Republic."

Out of the officers of the 14th came Major-General Palmer; Col. Johnson; Brev. Brig. Gen. Cyrus Hull; Col. Dudley C. Smith; Brig. Gen. Milton S. Littlefield; Lt. Col. Wm. Cam, and Brev. Brig. Gen. Henry Case, and probably others of note.

Camp Duncan
The rendezvous was appropriately named Camp Duncan—for Jacksonville's first Governor of the state.

One day in May, 1861, the then Governor Richard Yates, rode out to the grounds in a barouche, and then, mounting a horse, reviewed the regiment. Capt. Pitched of the regular army, then mustered the boys into the United States service, for three years. Before the war ended Capt. Pitched had become a brigadier general. This was May 25th.

June 19th, the 14th left—or tried to—at five o'clock in the morning for Quincy, from which place it crossed into Missouri, and was in the war zone.

Festivities
The ladies of Jacksonville surely did their duty by the soldiers, in going up to the camp, in giving them flowers, and in feeding them at noon, on the Public Square, in the old Congregational church—then called "Union Hall" where Trade Palace now is, on the south half of the east side of the square. The men were royally entertained. Several large evening parties were given to the officers. "And all went merry as a marriage bell."

The men were marched by companies, down to the Hall, for the noon dinner, and soon flowers became a part of their dessert and deserts.

There are a good many old fellows around here now who can tell of their boyish enjoyment of the 14th, and its stay here.

Grant
As has repeatedly been stated, July 5th, 1861, the 21st regiment of Illinois Volunteers, Col. U. S. Grant "riding ahead", came marching up West State street to the Fair grounds where the soldiers bivouacked for dinner, and then marched out to Allinson's Grove and spent the night.

McClernand's Brigade
Mr. Lincoln appointed Congressman John A. McClernand a brigadier general, and authorized him to raise a brigade. McClernand was a son-in-law of Col. James Dunlap, and the general secured the beautiful site now on the south side of Mound avenue, immediately west of the city limits, for his gathering place. It was an ideal spot for the purpose, and had the splendid spring of water on what has been known latterly as Strawtown.

Scattered companies came in, and they were certainly "raw recruits" in appearance. Some belonged to Col. John A. Logan's 31st regiment, and there were a few cavalrymen and artillerymen.

One fine August afternoon the 27th Illinois, armed and accoutered came marching in, and this writer accompanied the good man of the house up to the camp.

As we went along two boys, afterwards well known as Wm. H., and N. H. Barnes, tagged along up College avenue.

At the camp, after dismissing his men, while they were making camp, Col. N. B. Buford was introduced to my leader. Col. Buford was a royal looking Kentuckian, who had been educated at West Point, and with his long, gray hair, was worth seeing. He became a major-general.

The Brigade of which only about two thousand troops got here, stayed about a month; and one day it marched down College avenue to the old Wabash depot on North Main street, and left us. It was but a few weeks before McClernand and his men took part in the bloody battle of Belmont, Mo., and fought long and well.

Two Stray Troops
Along in the fall of 1861, two troops of cavalry stopped awhile, at different times, at "Camp Duncan." Jas. Catlin was an officer in one.

The 101st Illinois
In August and September of 1862, the 101st regiment of Illinois Volunteers took possession of "the old camp ground" west of the city. As this was a Morgan county regiment, it hardly seems as if a detailed description of it need be made.

But the Colonel was Chas. H. Fox; Lt.-Col., Wm. J. Wyatt; Major, Jesse T. Newman; Adjt., Harrison O. Cassell; Surgeon, Clarke Roberts; 1st. Asst. Surgeon, Jos. Miner; 2nd. Asst. Surgeon, Alonzo L. Kimber, Chaplain, Wingate Newman.

Our citizens can easily recall many of the officers and men of "our own" regiment. This was the only regiment which came back here at the end of the War. This regiment saw lots of hard service, proving "Brave boys are they, gone at their country's call."

The regiment left Jacksonville, Oct. 6th., 1862, being ordered to Cairo, Ill.

When it came home a fine reception was held in Strawn's Hall, at which U. S. Senator Richard Yates made that reception speech. The exercises in the Hall were followed by a splendid dinner in the Park, furnished by the ladies. It was probably about June 25, 1865.

The Woman's College affords an unusual opportunity to the young women of Jacksonville for college education. Special certificate and degree courses in domestic science, music, art and expression.

CORN FROM McDONALD'S
In the Elliott State bank is a remarkably fine ear of corn, a foot long, large size and well filled grains. It was raised by C. A. McDonald north of the city and is of the Reid Yellow Dent family. It hardly can be called a fair sample of Mr. McDonald's whole field, though he has a lot of good grain.

Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Becker and Mr. Becker's sister, Miss Kate, all came in from Concord yesterday in Mr. Becker's Ford car. They found the roads rather sloppy a part of the way but managed to make good time.

Corrected Figures on Oats Yield

An error in figures yesterday in the farm items credited Charles A. Rowe with an average yield of oats of three bushels more per acre than the records show. Mr. Rowe does not claim any yield in excess of the real figures and hence this correction. One field averaged 62 bus., one 55 and one 50. In the field with the highest yield only 1 bushel per acre was used for seed. However, Mr. Rowe does not advocate thin sowing unless the land is rich and in good condition. This field where the yield was 62 bus. was on his home farm on land that had been kept in a rotation of crops and was in excellent condition.

Weekly Crop Report

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 13.—Some damage to corn from wind and hail in Illinois is noted in the weekly weather and crop summary of the United States Weather bureau here issued today. The report says:

"The week was warm, with good rains in most counties. The sunshine was adequate. Corn condition is fair to good. The weather was favorable for maturing, but there was some damage from wind and hail. Silo filling began. Apples and peaches are rather short. The apple harvest has begun in the southern part of the state."

The Cow—Fittest of the Fit

Because the dairy cow is so efficient as a producer of food for man, dairying is destined to supplant other types of live-stock farming to a greater and greater extent, as the population of the world increases. It is the old story of competition and the survival of the most fit. In our own contemporary agriculture, it is easy to note the effect of rising land values on extensive farming. Much former range territory has been broken up into ranches and homesteads; ranches have divided into farms; the older grain-farming regions have had to adopt livestock; and where land has become high in price, dairying is being included as a part of, or is replacing other kinds of livestock farming. In the history of agriculture, high-priced land has always meant smaller farms and intensified methods, with a resultant increase in the income per acre. The United States will prove no exception, and since dairying is pre-eminently suited to varying degrees of intensification (adapting to it a wide range of land values), in addition to affording unequal advantages in conserving soil fertility, distributing labor, and furnishing a regular source of income, it is certain that the industry will grow steadily.

While cheap natural and artificial pastures in some parts of this country have brought about dairies of a semi-extensive type, dairy farming on the whole, is intensive farming on relatively high-priced land. Some of the highest priced farm lands in the world are devoted to dairying. In Friesland and across the Zuyder Zee in North Holland (the home of the Holstein), dairy farms occupy lands worth from $1,000 to $2,000 per acre. On the Channel Islands (Jersey, Guernsey, and Alderney), where dairy farming is almost the exclusive agricultural pursuit, land rentals range from $40 to $60 per acre per year. Necessarily, intensification is pronounced under such conditions. The Island of Guernsey supports a cow for every 1 1-2 acres of its tillable land. The farms are small, but, like other dairy countries the land is very fertile.—The Farmers' Review, Chicago.

EXPRESSIVE LOU WINS AMERICAN HORSE BREEDERS FUTURITY

Murphy Entry Leads Field From the Start to Finish in Both Heats—Traynor Whips Suldine into Second Place.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Expressive Lou, Tommy Murphy's bay filly won the $6,000 American Horse Breeder's Futurity, the feature of today's Grand Circuit races with ease.
The Murphy entry led the field from start to finish in both heats and crossed the line with plenty to spare.
The real contest developed in a triangular battle between Suldine, Lotto Watts and Bingen Silk. Lotto Watts finished second in the first heat after a hard stretch duel with Suldine. The battle for honors in the second heat produced a stirring finish. Rounding the turn into the stretch Suldine, Bingen Silk and Lotto Watts were almost on even terms about a length behind the speeding Murphy entry. Within two hundred yards of the finish Traynor whipped Suldine into second place.
Tomorrow the program includes the Governor's Stake and the Chamber of Commerce stake, each valued at $2,000. Six races including three events for gentlemen drivers will comprise the card.

SOME CORN SAMPLES

In the Ayers National Bank are a few ears of corn from the farm owned by M. F. Dunlap east of the city. The ears resemble Boone county White and are large and well filled. Mr. Dunlap says they are not a fair sample of the average yield as some ears have few kernels and some have trashy corn or kernels owing to the extremely hot weather at the time the pollen was developed. However there will be a fair yield and the good price will help.

GOT THE HORSES ASHORE.

And He Didn't Go About It in the Regular Official Way, Either.

In his younger days Sir Bryan Mahon was quite a character in the army and many are the tales that are told of his daredevil recklessness and his no less ready resourcefulness in an emergency.

Once, for instance, a lot of horses had to be unloaded at Ismailia. There were no boats and there was shortage of slings, to say nothing of groomsmen, breast girths and all the other queer paraphernalia that disembarking officers delight in.

But Mahon, who is, of course, a son of Erin's isle, had seen horses disembark on the wild Irish coast many and many a time in rough and ready fashion, and he knew what they could do when they had to. So, while the others were discussing ways and means below decks, he simply threw these horses overboard.

The animals promptly swam ashore, and while the horror stricken disembarking officer was looking on aghast, too surprised even for words, Mahon ordered the trumpet for "stables" to be sounded, and every horse promptly lined up on the beach.—London Telegraph.

DRILLED TO PERFECTION.

Secret of the Military Success of "the Madman of the North."

From drill man gets accustomed to doing under any circumstances what has been hammered into his brain time after time till it becomes second nature to him.

Charles XII. of Sweden, "the madman of the north," ripped most of Europe up the back again and again because his soldiers were drilled to perfection before he let them take the field at a time when there was great neglect of drill in other armies. He valued 1,000 well drilled fighters above 10,000 not so well drilled, and madman or genius, his judgment was vindicated repeatedly in terrible battles.

One night Charles XII. was surprised in Poland by an attacking army of 8,000 when his scant force of 600 was sleeping like the dead from the exhaustion of a hard march. Before his outposts and sentries could be driven in his small band was aroused, mounted, formed in battle line—all in pitchy blackness—and swung into a fierce charge upon the enemy. By daylight the Russians and Poles who had thought to eat him up were virtually annihilated.—Westminster Gazette.

How Clouds Are Colored.

The color of a cloud depends on the manner in which the sunlight falls upon it and the position of the observer. It will be noticed that high clouds are always white or light in color, and this is because the light by which they are seen is reflected from the under surface by the numberless drops of moisture which go to form the cloud. Heavy rain clouds, on the other hand, are found much nearer the earth, and so the light falls on them more directly from above, giving a silver lining to the cloud, though the under surface appears black, owing to the complete reflection and absorption of the light by the upper layers. Seen from above by an observer in a balloon the blackest rain clouds appear of the most dazzling brilliant white.

Duels in Greenland.

In Greenland when one man has been insulted by another the adversaries each compose a satire in verse.
This each man recites to his household until the servants and the women know it by heart. Then a place of meeting is appointed. The two men, the insulted and the offender, stand face to face, and each recites his poem.
Each man tries hard to raise the laugh against his adversary. Each man speaks in turn, whipping the enemy with epigram and quip, and after two hours of this wordy battle the meeting gives the victory to him of the two adversaries who has amused the whole assembly most.

An Odd Team.

Over one of the trails of the Sahara desert the queerest of teams is employed in drawing a two wheeled cart which carries light freight. The team consists of a camel and a small mule, and, while the loads may be unevenly distributed between them, the mates never disagree. Each draws his portion of the load, the camel loping along with great strides, while the mule trots beside him.

His Conundrums.

"Pop, tell me some conundrums."
"Conundrums? Why, I don't know any conundrums, my son!"
"Oh, yes, you do! I heard mother tell Aunt Mary the other day that you keep her guessing most of the time!"— Exchange.

Greatest Volcano Crater.

The largest volcano crater in the

It measures fourteen miles across one

"Do you know how to open the door

"Easiest thing doing. Just ring the

By increasing the earning capacity of each individual student we increase the per capita wealth of this community—the debt you owe us is no larger than the debt we owe you.

The resident students which we bring into this community from out of town spend thousands of dollars each year—an additional increase of wealth to this community.

Our students and graduates are employed in almost every important business house in this city and surrounding towns—you have shown your confidence in the Brown's Business College Institution by constantly calling on us for business trained help—and this we appreciate.

For fifty years we have proved that a thorough business education is a young man's quickest and shortest road to success—and a young woman's best protection.

Fathers—Mothers—Professional Men—Business Men

Send us the name of that deserving young man and woman—we thank you now—they will thank you in the years to come

Today we start our 51st year—with five thoroughly modernized Business Courses—this year brought up to the minute enabling us to teach business as it is actually conducted today—by the most efficient and experienced corps of teachers we have ever had.

We have decided that the most effective and lasting way to celebrate our Golden Jubilee Year would be to offer these comprehensive and complete business courses at a Special Low Tuition Rate so that no young man or woman in the years to come can ever say: "I never had an opportunity to get a Business Education."

We older people with business experience owe it to the younger generation to see that they receive the proper training to fit them for a successful business career.

Stop and think a minute. You yourself know of at least one young person who is unsettled as to his or her future. If they do not get a business education at this age, it will forever be too late.

It is your duty to at least step to the phone and give us the name and address of this young person. This is all we ask you to do—we will do the rest.

Brown's Business College has so perfected its organization that you do not know of a young person, regardless of location or financial condition, to whom we cannot give the advantages of a complete business education.

Right here in the city we have a Resident Day School which opens September 5th—for those employed during the day we have live, interesting Evening Classes three nights each week—and for those who cannot attend either the day or evening classes we have a Home Study Department teaching our courses exclusively by mail.

So you see that by giving us the name and address of that deserving young man or woman—perhaps it may be your own daughter or son—you will be doing a service which cannot be measured by mere dollars and cents.

Special Notice

As Principal of the Brown's Business College of Jacksonville, I agree to take a personal interest and assist in every way possible any young man or woman whom you recommend for a business education.

Valuable book free on request

In commemoration of our Golden Jubilee we have published a 52-page book entitled "HOW to Turn Your Energy Into MORE DOLLARS"—considerable time and money has been used in the preparation of this book—it is an inspirational, fascinating, interesting story guide for any ambitious young man or woman. We have a copy of this book for you—it is FREE for the asking—and we will also send copies, with your compliments, to any young men and women whose addresses you phone or send us in a letter or post card.

ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENCE

Tokio, Sept.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press)—Resolutions declaring that the decisions of the Economic Conference of Paris are on the whole acceptable have been adopted by the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Japan. Viscount Ishii, the minister for foreign affairs, declares that the resolutions will help dispel suspicions abroad that Japan is not solid in supporting the cause of the Entente Allies.

As to post-bellum measures, the meeting voted that the Entente Allies should protect themselves against commercial aggression by tariffs and other means and promote economic approachment, and that the Allies should freely open their national resources to one another and should refrain from a preferential policy in matters of import duties as far as the Entente Allies are concerned. The resolutions continued:

"The chambers of commerce desire that (a) The Entente Allies should amend their treatment of the goods exported from Japan. The treaties between Japan and England or France are partial in that there are fewer conventional tariffs on the other side than on this, and such partiality should be corrected. Between Japan and Russia there are no conventional tariff arrangements, and these arrangements should now be made.

(b) Regarding the preferential tariffs between one of the Entente Allies and its dominions it is desirable that no power should establish preferential tariffs with its dominions lest Japanese export trade be adversely affected."

The last is undoubtedly framed to meet tariff conditions between England and the colonies of Canada and Australia.

The congress requested the government to take steps for the incorporation of the resolutions so far as Japan is concerned. Japan has not yet adhered to the policy of the Entente Allies that there shall be no "trading with the enemy". In view of this, the resolutions of the business-men expressing approval of the war period proposals of the Paris conference have created a great deal of interest. It is expected that the attitude of the government will be announced shortly.

Vienna, Sept.—Thru United States Ambassador Frederic Courtland Penfield, a young Englishwoman named Ida Blackmore has received a full pardon from Emperor Francis Joseph after she had been found guilty of uttering incendiary pro-English remarks. She was a governess on the estate of Prince Hohenlohe and was sentenced to eight months' imprisonment for having exclaimed that "the Germans must be crushed!" Ambassador Penfield was appealed to because he represents British interests here during the war, and he put the case up to the Emperor.

Stockholm, Sept.—The Swedish Red Cross has arranged for one thousand Austrian and Russian war prisoners who have fallen sick during their confinement in camps in enemy countries to come to Sweden to stay while recovering from their ailments. Establishments at Troasens formerly used by the Swedish military are being prepared for their reception and the first party is expected to arrive there in November. Efforts are being made to extend the scheme and a committee has been formed under the presidency of Prince Carl.

Dublin, Ireland, Sept.—Potato blight has made its appearance in Ireland. Two hundred and seventy sub-districts of the country are said to be affected by it. This year preventive spraying materials are more costly than usual and less easily procured and this, together with wet weather during July, is believed to have accounted for the rapid spread of the disease. The Congested Districts Board has distributed 500 spraying machines to the people of the western districts, and it is hoped the disease will soon be checked.

Tokio, Sept.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Japan has just passed thru an unusual political crisis which threatened to bring about a change of ministry and yet resulted in nothing. The curious situation arose after repeated utterances of Premier Okuma that he intended to withdraw from political life, utterances which were followed by the insistent report that the premier actually placed his resignation in the hands of the Emperor conditional on his capability of finding a suitable successor.

At once the political forces of the Japanese Empire were set in motion. Two candidates at once appeared in prominence. They were Marshal Terauchi, the governor-general of Korea, and Viscount Kato, ex-minister of foreign affairs and leader of the Doshikai party, the principal of the political units which make up the government majority in the House of Representatives. Terauchi was conceived to be the candidate of the bureaucratic element of Japan which is constantly striving for official political power; Kato was the representative of the constitutional forces who are tenaciously struggling for the rigid maintenance, and even development, of a regime where the constitutional majority and not the forces of clan and bureaucracy shall have the guiding voice in the affairs of the nation.

After Premier Okuma's notice to the Emperor, which public opinion accepts as an act of resignation, Marshal Terauchi was summoned to Tokio and there ensued a number of conferences between the premier, Premier Okuma and Marshal Terauchi. It is affirmed that the Premier submitted certain conditions to Marshal Terauchi which were to be accepted if Premier Okuma was to transfer the government to his care. Chief among these was the condition that a Terauchi government must follow the same lines of policy as those of the present ministry. Up to now the negotiations have had no result. The general opinion is that they have failed, first, and secondly, because the governor himself to conditions as to policy.

Suddenly, after long negotiations, Dr. Takata, the minister of education, made a statement that as Premier Okuma could find no suitable successor he had decided to remain at his post. The impression exists that Premier Okuma's friends urged him insistently to remain in office and that the members of his cabinet were among those to recommend this decision.

The announcement by Dr. Takata created a lively discussion in the press and was followed by a meeting of the Siyukai opposition party which condemned the stand taken by the premier. Resolutions were adopted charging the premier with improperly submitting a conditional resignation and if interfering with the power of choosing a successor which the Siyukai declared rested solely with the Emperor. The resolution accused the premier of contravening the principles of the constitution. In a speech, Mr. K. Hara, the leader of the party, said: "In withdrawing his intended resignation Marquis Ohama may almost be charged with having deceived the Throne. Morality and the principles of right politics demand that the cabinet be visited with severe retribution. The patriotism of the country and its spirit of loyalty to the Throne make it intolerable for Marquis Okuma to remain longer in power."

Friends of the premier and the cabinet have risen to their support and maintain that it was legitimate for the Premier to retract his resignation if he could not find a suitable successor. They point out that precedent exists for one premier handing over the transfer of power from the late Prince Katsura to Count Yamamoto three years ago.

London, Sept.—The death of two brothers in each other's arms at the front, is related in private dispatches. They were Corporal Tom and Private Henry Hardwidge, of Ferndale, Rhondda Valley, both members of a Welsh regiment. An officer writes: "The eldest, Tom, was hit by a sniper's bullet and lay in the open under a scorching sun, when Henry, at the risk of his life, hastened to him with a pail of drinking water. Just as he reached him and as he was offering the water, a sniper shot him. He clasped his brother as the latter rose to take the water, and they died in each other's arms." A third brother remains in action in France.

CADDIES OF THE LINKS.

Their Originals Were Messenger Boys in Old Edinburgh.

Originally the caddy of the present day golf links appears to have been quite another individual, engaged in another line of activity. Caddies in the remote past were messenger boys in old Edinburgh. Gathered around the famous Edinburgh cross, where all important messages were read and many public ceremonies were held—the cross which was the very center of the old city—the caddies in their ragged clothes waited to be employed.

The chief merchants of the city, the leading official persons, the men of learning and of talent, the nobles, the lairds, the clergymen—all clustered about the cross during certain hours of the day, and very often some one wished to send a parcel or message to another part of the town, or a stranger to Edinburgh wanted to be directed.

Here was where the caddies were appealed to. These boys might be trusted with any duty with which they were charged. They were veritable street directories. A visitor to the town would often engage a caddy to be wholly at his bidding, as the boy's knowledge of the place was invaluable.

But, unless this visitor were most cautious, he would suddenly discover that his caddy, in addition to his vast knowledge of Edinburgh, knew also all about his employer—where he came from, what was his business in Edinburgh, his family connections, his tastes and preferences.—Exchange.

LIVING AEROPLANES.

Wherein Birds Differ From Flying Machines Made by Man.

It would be a mistake to suppose that the bird's wings enable it to fly. If wings spelled flying any of us could attach a pair and soar into the air.

The hollow bones of the birds make light bodies, but they are attached to a rigid backbone, which forms the main feature of the bird's body. This gives the central firmness, and the muscles do the rest. The wings balance their owners, and the tail acts as a rudder for steering. Often enough the bird seems to use its tail as a sort of brake.

It is interesting to compare the bird with the product of man's skill—the aeroplane. To begin with, there is no aeroplane made which copies the up and down motion of the bird's wings, all our machines having fixed wings, or planes.

But naturally man tried to copy the living fliers around him. He made wings of feathers, etc., connected them with his shoulders and legs and found that his muscles could not raise him an inch.

The muscles, or motors, which now drive him through the air are as strong as 200 horses, so no wonder he failed at first. Even the bird, with a body so perfectly formed for flight, has flying muscles equal in weight to all its other muscles put together.—Pearson's Weekly.

Dean Swift and the Cook.

There is a good story about Dean Swift apropos of the value of never overdoing anything. The dean's cook one day overroasted the leg of mutton for dinner, and in consequence she was summoned to the dining room. "Cook," said the dean in a pleasant voice, "this leg of mutton is overdone. Take it back and do it less."

"Impossible, your reverence!" exclaimed the cook.

"Well," replied her master, "supposing it had been underdone, you could easily have done it more."

"Certainly, your reverence."

"Then," said the dean, "let this be a lesson to you. If you commit a fault always take care that it is a fault which will admit of a remedy."

Rainbows.

The time of day or the state of weather when a rainbow appears is believed by many people to be an indication of future weather conditions. According to an old rhyme, a rainbow in the morning warns the shepherds to be prepared for rain shortly; an evening rainbow points to fine weather the next day. Sailors believe that a rainbow in the wind is a sure sign of continued wet. If it comes in the opposite quarter the rain will soon stop. Again, if in fair weather a rainbow be seen foul weather will speedily set in, but if the bow appear in foul weather fair weather will be at hand.

On the Contrary.

"What a lot of mail you've got this morning!" exclaimed the poet's wife. "But then, of course, this is your birthday, and those are 'Many happy returns of the day' from all your friends."

"No," said the poet, pushing aside a heap of rejected manuscripts. "These are unhappy returns of the day from the publishers."—New York World.

Not Much.

"There should be a national holiday called junk day, when every house, barn, shed, garage, etc., should be relieved of all its junk."

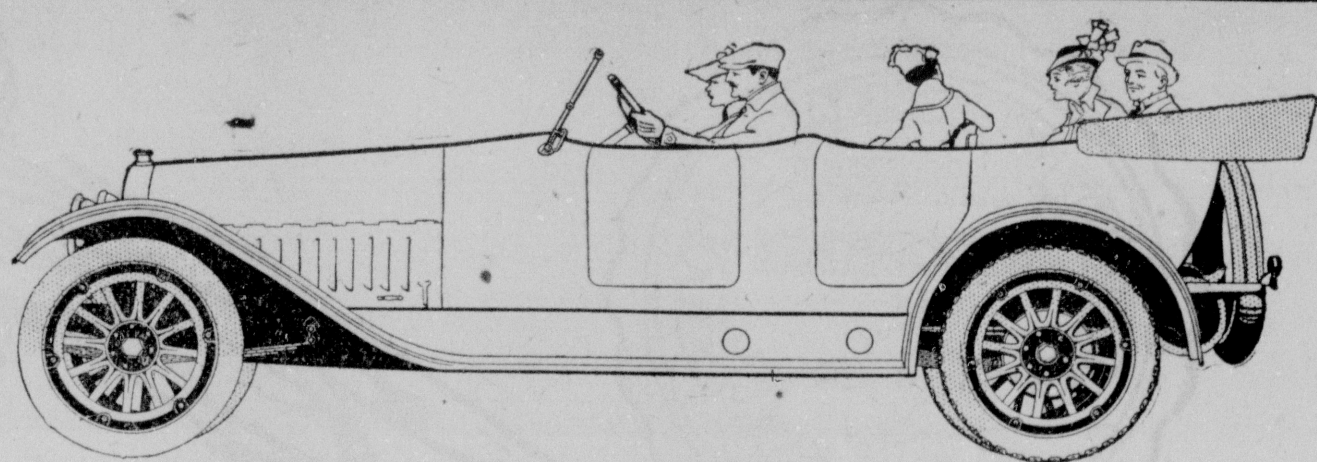

"That's right, old man, but do you realize how little there would be left of many a happy home?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Between Girls.

"She says she wishes she could see herself as others see her."

"That's just an excuse for spending a lot of time in front of a mirror."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Only deeds give strength to life; only moderation gives it charm.—Jean Paul Richter.

Metals and the Future.

Our ancestors did not live, work and prosper in an industrial age. They were an agrarian people, living from the earth, producing only a little more than they consumed. Metals were to them as jewels are to us. A Roman soldier retained his sword through life and transmitted it for use to his descendants. The factory system, in which the labor element is a fraction in productivity compared with what capital produces through machinery, is less than 100 years old. The United States consumes today about sixteen pounds of copper per capita per annum, while in the entire continent of Asia the consumption of copper is only a fraction of a pound per capita. This is because Asia is not an industrial country. It is in the position that the whole world was in a thousand years ago, and if Asia grows industrially the demand for copper and other metals will be such as to tax even the present resources of the world.—William L. Saunders in Engineering Magazine.

Our Growing Country.

We grow in this United States of ours at the rate of 4,433 folks a day, says the Country Gentleman. Think of it, ye descendants of the Mayflower pilgrims—enough new Americans every day to have crowded the passenger list of an armada of Mayflowers! And think of it also, ye raisers of dairy cattle and ye growers of foodstuffs—every week brings more than 30,000 new mouths to feed! A few years hence our growth will be at the rate of 10,000 a day. It will be as if little showers of hamlets and villages rained down constantly from the sky. These newcomers must all be fed and clothed. The farmer is the producer of the raw materials. He must follow closely our growth, speculate on it, prepare for it by progressive measures, keep abreast of all the live things that are doing. If he does not he will be left at the post.

Macaulay's Fifth Volume.

Macaulay lived to publish only four volumes of his "History of England," coming down to 1698. But after his death his sister prepared from his notes a fifth volume, carrying forward the history to the death of William III. This volume is included in all the later editions of Macaulay's "History of England." Macaulay's sister was Mrs. Trevelyan, the mother of Sir George Otto Trevelyan, who has written a history of the American Revolution. She was greatly devoted to her brother, as he was devoted to her. She alone was able to decipher his handwriting and copied the manuscript of his four volumes for the press. Consequently she was the best equipped person to prepare the supplementary volume.

It is said of Chief Justice Tilghman of Pennsylvania that he had a great regard for a dignified administration of justice, "and the only time," writes David Paul Brown, "that we ever observed him to be disconcerted upon the bench was upon one occasion when, the business of

FLAGS OF IRELAND

Only Since 1793 Has Green Been the National Color.

BEFORE THEN IT WAS BLUE.

That Was the Color of Fionn Mac-Cumhaill's Standard, Which Is Said to Be the True Flag of Erin—The Ancient "Spear and Serpent."

The universal belief concerning the flag of Ireland is that it has always been "the harp without the crown" imposed on a field of green and that green has from time immemorial been Erin's color.

I venture to say that ninety out of every hundred persons will assert, in answer to a query, that the harp on a green background has constituted Ireland's national design these many centuries, this belief obtaining generally among the Irish themselves.

In opposition to this belief it will appear strange when the asseveration is made that Ireland's national color until something more than a century ago was blue.

It may indeed produce a bit of a shock to many who have been wedded to the notion that "the Emerald Isle,"
"the shamrock so green," "our green isle beyond the sea" and other similar expressions were indissolubly and forever connected with the country's national colors.

But as a matter of fact the green flag made its first appearance in 1793, the year of the uprising, so that as flags go it is comparatively new.
Green, you know, is a blend of the orange and the blue, and it is asserted that green was adopted in 1798 by the United Irishmen to typify the union of north and south, orange being the color affected in the northern part of Ireland and blue in the southern provinces.

In point of antiquity the real Irish flag is the "spear and serpent," which appears in the arms of the O'Sullivan.
It is said to commemorate the incident of Gáidhéal Glas, the ancestor of Mil-lissus, who, tradition says, was cured of a snake bite by the rod of Moses.

Next to that comes the flag of Fionn MacCumhaill's militia, the golden sunset on a blue ground, and the weight of opinion among all Irish students of research seems to favor this as the true national flag. Indeed, blue was always Ireland's national color until 1798.

Quite a number of other flags have figured in Irish history, and each of them has its line of enthusiastic supporters. Not the least popular among these is the flag exhibiting three golden crowns imposed on a blue ground, which figures at the present day in the arms of the province of Munster.

This flag was accepted after the Norman invasion in the year 1170 as the ensign of Ireland, the three crowns representing the kingdoms of Desmond, Ormond and Thomond. It was retained until 1547, when Henry VIII. abolished it and substituted the harp.

Coming down to more recent times it is found that the parliament of Ireland, of which Henry Grattan was the head, did not recognize green, although it did accept the harp. That parliament's flag was a golden harp on a blue ground.

At the time of the union with England in 1801 a new flag was evolved apparently for the express purpose of incorporating it with what is now known as the union jack, but it does not seem to have caught the popular fancy any more than the act of union.

This was the red saltire on a white ground, which was christened St. Patrick's cross. Apparently it was taken from the arms of Trinity college at Dublin, though how Dublin came by it is a mystery.

The tricolor of green, white and orange—"The orange and green, with the stripe of peace between"—is the recognized flag of the Irish Nationalists, whose aim is complete independence.—

Hard to Move in Russia.

An American wished to move from the principal hotel in Petrograd to a smaller hotel around the corner. He came down with his bag packed ready to go. "Sorry," said the manager, "but you cannot leave this hotel or register at another hotel until we get your pass port from the police, and that will take a day and a night. You must go through exactly the same procedure as if you were leaving the country."

Gallieni's Epigrams.

The late General Gallieni was a master of epigrammatic expressions.
"Don't criticize until you can remedy," is one. "If you've got brains, use them; if not, plant cabbagees," was another of the general's sayings. "Set things going, and keep them going," and "Say what you want done, but don't say more than a man can remember" were two other counsels.— Westminster Gazette.

Temperament.

Technically, temperament means "the special type of mental constitution due to natural characteristics of the bodily organism." Broadly speaking, temperament is character—the mental make-up of a person, the way he is inclined to think and feel about things in general.—New York American.

His Own Defense.

"The charge was assault and battery."
"Have you any one to defend you?" asked the judge.
"Defend me!" exclaimed the prisoner indignantly. "I don't want anybody I'll defend myself. Come on, my half dozen of you!"—New York Times.

Glory is never where virtue is not.—

AN EQUINE HERO.

Story of Old Baldy, One of the Most Famous Horses in History.

The head of one of the most famous horses in history hangs mounted on a shield in the headquarters of George G. Meade post in Philadelphia. It is that of Old Baldy, General Meade's mount in the operations of the armies of the Potomac and Virginia. The horse was raised in the west and was brought east by Colonel E. D. Baker of Oregon, who was killed at Ball's Bluff on Oct. 21, 1861. General Meade bought him in Washington for $150.

The horse was wounded in the nose by a piece of shell at the battle of Bull Run on July 21, 1861, but was not put out of service. He served at Dranesville, Mechanicsville, Gaines Mills and Groveton and was wounded again at the second battle of Bull Run, on Aug.
30, 1862, when he was shot through a hind leg.

Two weeks later he was ridden at the battle of South Mountain, and on Sept.
17 he was shot through the neck at the battle of Antietam and was abandoned, apparently dying. He was afterward found by General Meade's servant browsing on the battlefield. He had recovered sufficiently to serve General Meade in the October and November campaign to Falmouth. In 1863 he was at Chancellorsville during the first three days of May and at Gettysburg on July 1, 2 and 3. He was shot through the ribs on July 2.

He was in three other engagements that year, and in 1864 he was in the Wilderness campaign at Spotsylvania, North Anna Creek, Cold Harbor, Petersburg and several other places where there was hard fighting.

At the end of the war he was taken to General Meade's country place near Philadelphia, where he remained seven years. He was led in the great parade in Philadelphia on Dec. 10, 1879, in honor of General Grant's return from his tour of the world. He was later given to John J. Davis of Jenkintown, who cared for him until it became necessary to kill him because he became too feeble to stand. This was on Dec. 16, 1882. He survived his famous master about ten years.—Philadelphia Ledger.

DEFOE IN THE PILLORY.

When the Famous Writer Was Both Punished and Applauded.

The whipping post had as its companion 100 years or more ago, not in this country, but in England, the pillory.
This punishment was ended by an act of the British parliament, dated June 30, 1837.

Perhaps the most famous sufferer at the pillory was a man who has delig-ted millions of English speaking boys and girls and many older persons by his book, "Robinson Crusoe," which was the precursor of juvenile books as we now know them. This sufferer was Daniel Defoe, who was not only a writer of entrancing fiction, but famous as a keen political pamphleteer.

In 1703, in the reign of Queen Anne, there came from his hand "a scandalous and seditious pamphlet," entitled
"The Shortest Way With the Dissenters." A reward of £50 was offered by the government for the author, and,
rather than that his printer and publisher should suffer in his stead, Defoe gave himself up and was sentenced to be pilloried three times.

On July 23 of that year the daring satirist stood unabashed on the pillory in Chancery. The punishment was repeated two days afterward in the Temple, where a sympathizing crowd flung garlands instead of garbage at the stout hearted pamphleteer, drank his health with loud acclaim and sang his "Hymn to the Pillory." In this hymn occur these lines:

Tell them the men that placed him here
Are scoundrels to the times;
Are at a loss to find his guilt
And can't commit his crimes.

—Indianapolis News.

Water Colors.

Pigments have been used from the earliest times and are now used by all savages for decorative purposes. But the paint used in Babylon and Nineveh and in Pompeii was composed of pigments mixed not with oil, but with water to which had been added a little glue, egg albumen or perhaps sometimes casein, which is albuminous matter from milk; or the gluten from cereal grains. Glue, however, which was well known to the ancient Egyptians, was the most used binding material. Such paints are now known as fresco paints or water colors.

Not All Her Fault.

The new maid was untidy, and the mistress bore with her patiently at first. But on the third day she placed a very unclean dinner plate on the table, and patience broke down.

"Really, Harriet, you might at least see that the plates are clean."

"Well, mum," Harriet rejoined, "I owns to them thumb marks, but that dried mustard was there afore I come."

—London Tit-Bits.

Not Through the Roof.

"We lost our cook yesterday by the gasoline route."

"Do you mean that she poured it on the kitchen fire?"

"No. Another family lured her away by offering her the use of a fine motor-car."—Boston Transcript.

Whoreupon Pa Grunted.

"Would you marry pa if you had it to do all over again?"

"Yes, my dear, I would, but I think I'd collect all the fine gifts he promised me first."—Detroit Free Press.

"Not yet, ma'am, but we'll catch it.
We get everything that's a-goin'!"—

VISITOR FROM PANAMA TELLS OF CONDITIONS THERE

A. L. Hoecker, Formerly of This City,
Has Been in Government Service
There—Col. Goethals' Great Work
—The Trouble From Slides.

John Hoecker on South Clay ave. has been enjoying a visit for a few days from his brother, A. L. Hoecker, wife and child who came here from Panama. The home of the visitor is Carlville tho he was employed for some years in this city, a part of the time at Capps' factory as stenographer. For five years he has been stenographer in the government offices in Panama and expects to go back to his duties before long. Mr.
Hoecker is an intelligent gentleman and has a clear idea of conditions on the important isthmus and is a close observer.

It is very paternal down there, the government managing stores, transportation and matters generally and military rule and government officials insure stability and freedom from graft or wastefulness. There are at present about 3,000 Americans down there and 15,000 laborers, principally West Indian Negroes with a sprinkling of Italians, low caste Hindus, Spaniards and some other nationalities. Large machine shops are operated to keep in condition the equipment of the Panama railroad, the big dredges and other government works, locks machinery and the like.

Sanitation System

Thruout the whole the splendid genius of Col. Goethals is manifest in the perfect system by which everything is managed. The scourge of yellow fever is conquered by the skill and wonderful ability of American physicians and surgeons and the remarkable talents of Col. Goethals enabled him to cooperate with the doctors in stamping out the evil and keeping it out. Greatest care is constantly exercised to do away with standing water or any kind of a place in which mosquitoes could breed and all other precautions are being taken and as the land is being more and more cleared and drained malaria is lessening.

Col. Goethals' resignation has been tendered but not yet accepted. During his absence Col. Chester Harding is in command and is a very capable and popular officer. It is probable that he will succeed in command should Col. Goethals retire.
He is a brother of W. P. G. Harding, the eminent banker and member of the federal reserve board.

A great work yet is being done in the way of erecting buildings for hospitals, commissary department, schools and other purposes while dry docks are also being constructed as well as new quarters and other structures.

Schools Set Good Results

Schools are maintained for the children of government employees and they are better than many in the states. The government requires a good quality of teachers and faithful, competent work. White and colored are taught in separate schools and much is being done for the welfare of the children down there.

The health on the isthmus is good.
Rain falls about nine months of the year so there is no lack of moisture, but the heat is not really oppressive. The range is 85 to 90 and 95 is the top record while the nights are cool enough to justify blankets. Of course everything that warm climates will produce is grown there in abundant and fruit is plentiful as corn in Illinois while some articles of food have to be imported.

Canal Business Grows

The business of the canal is great and is naturally increasing all the time. During July 140 ships passed thru it and before that, since its opening in April, something more than a hundred passed thru each month and with the end of the European war the patronage will increase immensely. Many coasting vessels use it while world navigators also pass thru its portals. Recently a London-Australian line has been established and each way the ships save well toward a thousand miles and a great deal of bad weather and dangerous navigation. Some supplies are sent the Allies in this way and ships for all parts of the world are seen at the entrance. It is also quite a popular route for ships bound for the west coast of South America.

While a part yet of the population down there is transient a large force will be needed permanently to maintain all the works, police the canal and do all kinds of work.

Slides Cause Worry

Of course the one great question now is that of the slides. It has been very hard to guard against this trouble from the fact that the soil is of such a nature and so saturated with water from the nine months annual rains. The best route for the canal lay thru a tall peak so that the distance from its top to the bottom of the canal is some five hundred feet and it was simply impossible to guard against slides successfully from the start. There are three places, the Culebra, Gold Hill and Llauracha (meaning cockroach in English). The total distance is some half a mile and a big rock is between two of the cuts; it is larger than the court house in Jacksonville and not likely to make any trouble.
One big flat rock got into the channel and made some trouble but it is out.

Earth from the Channel

The slides are now peculiar. The earth doesn't any more slide into the canal from the top of the banks but it rises in the bottom of the channel and away back, sometimes as far as from West State street to North street, the land will sink away. The great slide of last fall was the most serious but the canal was opened in April and as far as I know, has been kept open with the exception of two days tho I left a few weeks ago and am not positive regarding that matter. The engineers in charge are all capable men and the mighty enterprise is being managed with consummate skill and ability and sooner or later I feel certain the trouble from slides will have been wholly overcome.

With all the handicaps the business of the canal is great and of course is only started. At the close of the great war commerce must mightily increase and so much distance and such bad weather and dangerous routes are to be avoided by the use of the canal that it will constantly grow in importance."

Mr. Hoecker expects to leave with his wife and child for Carlville today and at the close of his furlough means to return to his duties on the isthmus. He is an intelligent, pleasant gentleman and is a valued assistant in the office in which he is employed.

JOHN MAGILL HERE
TO VISIT FRIENDS

Long Time Jacksonville Resident
Enthusiastic About I. O. O. F.
Home.

John Magill arrived in the city yesterday on a visit with friends here. He is now living at the Odd Fellows' home for aged brothers and Rebekahs at Mattoon and from his fine appearance it would be safe to say that he could be sent out as an advertisement of that worthy institution to good advantage.

Mr. Magill is enthusiastic over the home which he says is managed for the welfare of aged Odd Fellows and Rebekahs. Of the former there 133 and of the 42 in the home at present which is about its capacity. There are 24 applications for admission on file and they will be admitted when there are vacancies. Since the beginning of the year ten have died mainly from old age. There is a hospital with thirty beds and 23 patients are now in it.
Supt. Saylor and his worthy wife, the matron, are surely the right persons in the right place. Every possible effort for the welfare and happiness of the old people is put forth and they are generally a happy and contented set of people.
There is a chapel which will hold 250 persons and in it there are services by some minister of the place nearly every Sunday. Then there is the carryall which will take a load to church any time it is desired.
These old persons care for their rooms as far as they are able and their work is supplemented by capable young chambermaids who keep things spotlessly clean and aid the residents in many ways.

There is a farm of 136 acres and a large part of the table furnishing comes from it and Mr. Magill says the bill of fare is excellent leaving no possible causes for complaint. A farmer has charge of the land and has two hired men working for him and the old men often take a turn in addition to getting well needed exercise when health and strength will permit. They have a reasonable amount of amusement and in general life is made as pleasant as possible for all there.

Surely Mr. Magill has been well cared for as he looks fine and is renewing his youth. He expects to be in the city a few days before returning.

Mrs. Stephen Leake of the southeast part of the county called on city friends yesterday.

HANDSOME FURNISHINGS IN AYERS BANK BASEMENTRooms for the Public Made Even More Attractive

Many Jacksonville visitors who have inspected the basement room of the Ayers National bank building have declared that they have never seen a basement room with a better arrangement or more handsome appearance. A visit to the basement now shows the addition of furniture of design and finish well suited to the splendid surroundings. Just east of the broad stairway a rug rich in design has been laid on the marble floor and about the wicker center table are grouped a number of very comfortable chairs of the same material, upholstered in colors which tone in with the general effect.

The same material has been used in the construction of the four spacious fern boxes and the foliage of these plants adds greatly to the general attractive appearance. An electrolier on the center table is also of like material. The finest grade of wicker was chosen because of the lightness of the furniture thus possible and visitors to the bank building will find the chairs not only comfortable but easily moved. Pictures, some real works of art, have also been added to this portion of the corridor. One shows Trinity church in New York, another a famous castle in France and a third is a woodland scene. The frames and picture colorings accord perfectly with the surroundings.

In the east apartment of the basement a rug has been placed beneath the reading table and the furniture of the whole corridor are such as will be appreciated by the public. M. F. Dunlap, president of the Ayers National bank, has no doubt had these improvements and additions made because of the increasing uses of the basement corridors by individuals, committees and organizations. The bank management has from the very beginning made the public feel welcome to use all parts of the basement rooms.

SOME FINE STOCK.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—To the Editor of Jacksonville Journal: Doubtless it will be of much interest to your numerous readers, many of whom are stock men, to state that last week we sold for the noted feeders James Walker & Son of Scottville, Ill., 71 head of steers averaging 1562 @ $11.50. It was 10c per hundred more than any others reached on that market. James Walker has undoubtedly sold more "top notchers" than any other man in the trade for the number he has fed, and he has been making prime beef cattle for more than fifty years.

Yours truly
O. S. Green.

Miss Gertrude Ayers returned to Jacksonville yesterday from Omena, Mich., where she has been for a number of weeks the guest of Mrs. E. E. Crabtree. Miss Ayers went to Michigan after an extended visit with friends in Boston and elsewhere in the east and has been away from Jacksonville for the past four months.

FOOLING MARK TWAIN.

An Autograph Joke That Was Sprung Upon the Humorist.

George W. Cable had been giving readings from his wonderful Creole stories and had visited Mark Twain in Hartford. While there he had been taken down with the mumps, and it was during his convalescence that the plan for a combined reading tour had been made. This was early in the year; the tour was to begin in the autumn.

Cable, having quite recovered in the meantime, conceived a plan to repay Mark Twain's hospitality. It was to be an April fool—a great complimentary joke. A few days before the first of the month he had a "private and confidential" circular letter printed and mailed it to 150 of Mark Twain's friends and admirers in Boston, New York and elsewhere asking that they send the humorist a letter to arrive April 1 requesting his autograph.

It would seem that each one receiving this letter must have responded to it, for on the morning of April 1 an immense pile of letters was unloaded on Mark Twain's table. He did not know what to make of it, and Mrs. Clemens, who was party to the joke, slyly watched results. They were the most absurd requests for autographs ever written. He was fooled and mystified at first, then, realizing the nature and magnitude of the joke, he entered into it fully—delighted, of course, for it was really a fine compliment.

Some of the letters asked for autographs by the yard, some by the pound. Some commanded him to sit down and copy a few chapters from "The Innocents Abroad." Others asked that his autograph be attached to a check. John Hay requested that he copy a hymn, a few hundred lines of Young's "Night Thoughts," etc., and added:

"I want my boy to form a taste for serious and elevated poetry, and it will add considerable commercial value to have it in your handwriting."

Altogether the reading of the letters gave Mark Twain a delightful day.—Albert Bigelow Paine in St. Nicholas.

SLEEPING NEAR DEATH.

Naps That Might Have Landed Those Who Took Them In Eternity.

A short time ago a man was discovered in his lunch hour fast asleep on a plank. His arms were hanging down, one on each side of the board, which was about a foot wide. He was snoring gloriously and quite carelessly, whether awake or asleep, that if he turned over for greater comfort he would "tumble out of bed" 120 feet, for that plank was part of the scaffolding erected for the repair of a church spire!

A similar disregard for danger was reported lately during the erection of some electrical works. One of the men engaged on the tall chimney, missing his mate at the lunch hour, went up the half finished chimney to find him. He discovered him fast asleep on a narrow ledge of brick inside the shaft, a fall from which meant a drop of eighty feet.

On one occasion a circus arrived in a certain town not a hundred miles from London at an early hour after a long journey and a performance the previous night. As a consequence few of the company got any sleep. That day there was the usual procession and the afternoon performance. The lion tamer had had a very rough time because of the illness of one of his beasts.

The evening performance arrived, and this man had to pretend to go to sleep with his head on the body of a couchant lion, finishing up the performance by springing up and putting his head in another lion's mouth.

But when the jumping up time came a gentle snore was heard. The man was fast asleep with his head pillowed on a lion!—London Globe.

Military Rifles Remodeled.

Nations with large armies were often loath to discard their old weapons and frequently altered existing models to bring them up to date. Thus we note that England converted her old muzzle loading Enfields in 1864 and 1865 to use the Snider action with a metallic cartridge case. In 1886 Austria adopted the Mannlicher .433 caliber with a straight pull bolt action and a box magazine, loading from a steel clip. Two years later the caliber was reduced to .315, using black powder. The sights of these rifles were graduated in 1890 on the adoption of smokeless powder.—Outing.

Eagle and Snake.

The eagle will dive upon a snake whenever it gets the chance. The eagle usually swoops upon its prey, seizes it by the tail, bears it aloft and lets it fall. It never attacks it when coiled, but first drives it to flight by screams and the beating of its wings. The snake is either killed or stunned by the fall, whereupon the eagle carefully cuts off the head and devours the body, which is usually very fat.

Under Obligation.

"That man Jones backed me into a corner last night and kept me there two hours telling me the bright things his two-year-old boy has said."

"Gosh! You must owe Jones an awful lot of money if you'll stand for that!"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Contrary to Precedent.

"The speaker seems to be an unusually modest man."

"What makes you think so?"

"He makes all his promises in the first person plural and all his excuses in the first person singular."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

"Mary, have you cemented the handle on the water pitcher you dropped yesterday?"

"Well, mum, I started to, but I dropped the cement bottle."—Puck.

COURSES OF STUDY AT J. H. S. SIMPLIFIED AND RE-ARRANGED

The Number Has Been Reduced to Four and Stricter Conformity to the Course Will be Required—All Will Take Spelling and Writing.

The courses of study at Jacksonville High school have been reorganized and simplified and as the first week draws to a close it is apparent that this will prove of great value to teacher and pupil alike. The student may select his course, but the line of study once settled upon, a stricter adherence to course will be required than was true when a larger number study programs were offered.

There are now four courses, classical college entrance, scientific college entrance, commercial and industrial.

The industrial course takes the place of the former manual training and domestic science courses.

It is not the purpose of the school authorities to permit students as a general rule to take more than four studies. It is not always possible to follow this rule at present as a number of pupils have so mixed their course that extra studies will be necessary in order to meet requirements.

The new program provides that all must take one year of writing before graduation and that spelling must be taken by all high school students for one period per week for three years and must carry the spelling examinations during the fourth year, before graduation. The spelling classes will be held in the high school auditorium and the words will be given from the platform by Principal Callahan.

A MERRY WEINER ROAST
Tuesday evening the classes taught by Mrs. John Gunn and Miss Harriet Davis in the Westminster church Sunday school, accompanied by Miss Davis and Rev. Mr. Landis, the pastor, sought the hospitable home of Mrs. Gunn, a few miles west of the city to enjoy a weiner roast. Some of the boys rode out on wheels and the worthy pastor took some in his car, and all arrived in due season and at once prepared to enjoy a first class time. Boyish appetites made the weiners disappear as if by magic while in all the good times the minister and teachers entered fully and helped the young gentlemen to as merry an occasion as possible. The rain drove them into the house but didn't dampen their spirits any and all devoted themselves to innocent fun and succeeded admirably until the time came to return and all voted the occasion all that heart could wish.

The members of the classes were Frederick Noyes, Harold Kamm, Walter Bradish, Harold Munson, Warren Kamm, Earl Tilton and Edward Landis.
